

Arbitrary Wagon Wheel Education

Have you ever asked yourself why children are compelled to attend some kind of school – including home education – for exactly 180 days per year, and study particular state-mandated subjects, and blah blah blah? Children are naturally gifted at learning. Why should they be shackled like convicts to an arbitrary wagon wheel schedule, and spun about from one class to another?

This mandatory process has nothing to do with the proper development of children; for most, it stifles their curiosity and creativity, and leaves them incompetent at math and reading and other skills. In an environment better suited to their nature, the same children could learn faster, joyfully, and more completely.
