The government is calling it a “federal survey,” but when cars are stopped at a police roadblock, directed into a parking lot, and asked by federal contractors for samples of their breath, saliva, and even blood, I would suggest that there is a lot more than a “survey” going on! American citizens (and indeed, individuals around the world) are being conditioned to accept increasingly intrusive searches and investigations without any evidence or even indicators of wrongdoing. From TSA agents sexually assaulting individuals who have the audacity to want to fly commercial to jackbooted thugs initiating what essentially amounts to anal rape in New Mexico, our natural rights are being daily violated in an increasingly egregious manner. To say that a line has been crossed is an understatement.... The question now is how do we most effectively resist this ignominious tyranny?
