

Human Nature Has a Past, Present, and Future

Nobody asked but ...

I will grant you that homo sapiens as currently constituted is an unambitious evolutionary experiment in higher order thinking hampered by lower order instinct. The truth that human nature is natural, however, is incomplete. It is also natural to optimize adaptation. It is also natural to aspire to a higher level. If we survive, nature will eventually take us to a different level. That we may not achieve anarchy in our lifetime is no reason to explain it away.
