

Individualism

Nobody asked but ...

The Center for Individualism reports that Hayek's manifesto on individualism includes, "Individualism treats people equally, but does not try to make them equal."

I know what they are trying to say, but the very most important fact about individuals is that no two are the same ... therefore no two relationships are the same.

Better to say, individualism sees every relationship differently, but applies a consistent set of principles to each.

— Kilgore Forelle