On Government Failures II

Unhappy Government Failure Day. Let us never forget: the group of people who call themselves "government" failed their supposed charter to protect Americans on 9/11; this same group of people then launched two heretofore endless wars in Iraq and Afghanistan, profiting nobody except themselves and their corporate war racketeering partners; this same group of people then granted themselves even more power over and plunder from Americans; when these people fail, it is never a reason to remove their power, but always justification for more power and plunder; these same people hubristically tell us they have the knowledge and resources to keep us safe from the boogeymen they have either failed to detect or partnered with in their quest for global hegemony. Tell me: who's the bigger threat to my life, liberty, and property if not these fuckups who erroneously and maniacally believe they have the right and capability to rule the world? And that's today's two cents.
