

On SCOTUS

Those that feel anything toward the SCOTUS ruling on so-called “gay marriage” feel quite strongly one way or the other. Many are lamenting the decision, while many others are celebrating it. Frankly, I’m disgusted by both sides. Why shouldn’t gays be allowed to marry? Mind your own business, I say. Just as importantly, why should we celebrate a SCOTUS ruling, any SCOTUS ruling? That’s like celebrating the slave master for giving his slaves more leisure time. That this charade even exists is a moral outrage. Free the slaves! Abolish SCOTUS! Smash the state! (Nonviolently, of course.) Then we’ll have true cause to celebrate. And that’s today’s two cents.

Skyler.