

Re: On Collectives II

Kilgore, though no one is held accountable, a certain individual or some certain individuals are still accountable for the actions taken. If a committee decided the course of action to be taken by their underlings, then those who favored the course and those who performed the actions are the ones accountable for the outcome.

Skyler.