

Re: What Would I Do?

Kyle Marmann made my slap my forehead with this comment on my latest column:

First things first. In a free society, meth would be made by professionals in a controlled environment. The finished product would most certainly be cheap & readily available on the open market thus no one would have incentive to make it in their basement.

Skyler.