

Science March

Nobody asked but ...

A car goes with specific inputs. Economy goes with many more inputs, but less specific. It is no less a science than physics and chemistry. These sciences are interdependent. Economics may not be in the march for two reasons; 1) scientists often mistrust economics as being unspecific, and 2) scientists only trust fictional data wherein input is controlled, and nonspecific output (undesired) is ignored. Non-linear, unspecific, unquantifiable, complex output need not inquire.

— Kilgore Forelle