

The Enemy of liberty

This local town government is anti-liberty, as has been whatever government any town I've ever lived in or near suffered under.

The Texas and New Mexico governments are anti-liberty. So was every state government I have been bothered with.

The U.S. government is anti-liberty. That's the only national government I've had any experience with, but I'd be willing to bet all the others are anti-liberty to some extent.

A world government would be anti-liberty.

What's the common thread? Government.

Government is anti-liberty.

Liberty is the enemy of tyranny. Governments (or their supporters) seem to take this personally. So, of course, all governments are going to be against liberty to some extent. If they want to consider me their enemy because of this, that's fine with me.
