

The Futility of Politics

Guest post by Robert P. Murphy.

As this October issue [of the Lara-Murphy Report] will be published just before the presidential election, and especially because our interview this month with Murray Sabrin touches on the subject, I thought it appropriate to share my general thoughts on the so-called “political process.” To cut to the chase: I think it can be entertaining, but that people who revere liberty should focus their energies elsewhere.

Read the full thing »