

To the Next Adventure

I wanted to apologize for the absence of columns and blog posts on my part. I've begun a new adventure, this one in commerce, and it has taken all of my creative energies. I don't know when I'll start writing again, or podcasting for that matter, probably not for some time. For now my focus is on family and business. I will shortly be publishing an anthology on unschooling written by unschooling dads, and I have several more books planned for the future. Time will tell when those will be completed. Wish me luck!

Skyler.