

Triggered into Statism

I hope there's never an issue that is able to trigger me to the point that I start believing it's OK to archate— freelance or through government. If it were to happen, I believe it would be a strike against me, not a real justification for initiating force or violating property.

I see so many people who develop a big “but” after years of seemingly advocating liberty—until one thing comes up. For some it is some sort of sex; for some it's “borders”; others find a different trigger.

I try to understand. I really do. But I can't help but wonder why it was so easy for them to abandon liberty. And I want to make sure I am never in that same boat.