

A Vote is Not a Voice

Written by Russ Ted Fugal.

I would like to reiterate that a vote is not a voice. The power of your actions is your voice. You have just as much voice today as you did yesterday. No campaign or election can diminish that power. Your voice is not relinquished to those who sit in Washington.

I combat climate change through my personal choices with more effect than 59 million votes for Hillary. For example, I voluntarily pay my utility a premium for renewable energy and will do so until I have solar on my roof.

The world is not ending. True, I couldn't stop Bush from bombing civilians, nor could I stop Obama, nor will I be able to stop Trump. But there are things I can change, and those are my actions.
