

War Game Florence

Nobody asked but ...

Why do soldiers and their equipment blossom like dandelions whenever there is a natural disaster? Could it be that the state can never resist an opportunity to show who is in charge?

The state must show this pretense even at high school football games.

Now you know why, having Twitter, the oligarchs tweet. It's the same principle as facetime. If one always is aware of another's presence, after awhile that other seems to be a necessity.

Do you think that a color guard and an anthem are critical to the existence of a football game?
