

Words Poorly Used #58 — Achieving Anarchy

I do have a hangup with the idea contained in " ... should anarchism ever be achieved ... ," which I believe mischaracterizes the goals of the libertarian, anarchist, voluntaryist. My goal is to be left free from the state. I agree that general anarchy would be a dangerous affair, but I see no evidence that government is any less dangerous — the same types of [expletive]s would take advantage of either case. Statists, including minarchists, demand a plan. I have no desire to fashion any plan for you, for society, for others in general. In fact, a demand that I submit a plan to anyone else for approval is just plain rude.
