

Capitalism, Communist Tax Evasion, Section 230, & Libertarian Congress (23m) - Episode 407

Episode 407 has Skyler giving his commentary on the following entries to r/shitstatistssay: @TikTokInvestors shares, "So capitalism is an economic system based on infinite 'growth' and infinite consumption..."; buttstuff_magoo writes, "In fact, not paying taxes is as communist as it gets. It's free riding and profiting off of the contributions of others while contributing nothing yourself."; Stunning_Capital writes, "I don't see anything un-libertarian about repealing Section 230. These companies are protected from defamation suits on the grounds that they merely provide a public square. Well if they don't want to provide a public square, that's fine, but then they should be held liable for defamation just like the rest of us."; and @omidG9 tweets, "Well one reason congress doesn't work is libertarians don't know how to run a government so they just blame the institution instead of themselves".
