

Critical Race Theory is Divisive and Unsustainable

One of the reasons I believe that critical race theory is so divisive and unsustainable is that it requires the majority of the population to actively advocate against the interests of their own children and family. Promoting the welfare of a white child above others is a furtherance of white supremacy and the fundamental basis of structural racism. Of course, most people would agree that a parent should be an advocate and promoter of their own child in life, but critical race theory innately is against it.

This is a major reason why I can't let my kids be educated by modern leftists. They believe that being an advocate for a white child is oppression. Ergo, they will be actively disempowering my children and devaluing them in their philosophy and actions.