

Government Will Lose the War on Piracy

Written by Jeffrey Tucker for Laissez Faire Today.

It began as a skirmish. Then it was a battle. It became a war. Now it is a bloody conflict that is global in scope. Both sides have passed the point of no return. There is no question who is winning and going to win totally in the end, despite massive carnage along the way.

The field of battle in this case are the digital networks that swirl around the world in arrangements so thick and wide — seemingly infinite points of light that represent human contact backed by technological genius— that they surpass the capacity of the human mind to conceptualize them.

The two sides: everybody vs. everybody's governments.

Read the full thing »