

Guns – Time to Try Something Different

I recently heard an anti-gun bigot saying, in relation to mass shootings, “What we’ve been doing isn’t working. It’s time to try something different.”

He’s right, but I’ll bet he doesn’t know he’s right.

What his team has been doing isn’t working. It’s never going to work... unless the goal is to make mass shootings more common. It’s time to try something different, all right. It’s time to stop trying (or pretending to try) to prevent mass shootings with more “laws” which make it safer to be a mass shooter.

Past time. Long past time to get rid of all the anti-gun “laws”. All of them. Every single last one. Stop giving mass murderers what they want; what they need. Stop providing them with pools of unarmed- disarmed- potential victims.

Maybe disarmed victims are what the anti-gun bigots want. It’s not what I want. I want mass shooters to die in their attempt to kill people.

If you advocate anti-gun “laws” you are helping losers become evil losers. You are empowering them to murder more people. If the NRA “compromises” yet again they deserve to die as an organization.

So, yeah. It’s time to try something different because what you’ve been trying isn’t working.

Not one more inch.
