

Job Description

Nobody asked but ...

If you were the top political adviser to a politician, how much sense would it make to say that the advice-recipient made the worst political mistake in modern history? The recently departed top advisor made such an admission on television this past week-end. What did he think his job description was? If it was not to advise against epic political mistakes, then how did he justify his position?

— Kilgore Forelle