

Making the Whole World Idiot-Proof

Not only do busybody “government” bureaucrats think it’s their job to babysit and control everyone “for their own good,” but most of the peasants seem to agree. As a particularly annoying example, there are a lot of places in nature where our wise and caring masters have decided that we peons should only be allowed to walk on a paved path. Because you might hurt yourself if you climb on a rock or something. And your overlords cannot allow that.

While it’s obnoxiously condescending and paternalistic for the parasite class to act that way, it’s even more pathetic how many of their subjects think that it should be the job of freaking politicians and their underlings to make nature safe. If you don’t know that climbing on rocks can be dangerous, kindly lock yourself in your own house, permanently, because you’re too stupid to be out in the real world. Stop whining to have liars and crooks make the whole world idiot-proof, which is not only impossible to accomplish, but stupid and evil to try.