

Offended by an Intended Victim

Every statist (including every minarchist) advocates that I be forced, under threat of being caged, to fund “government” things that he thinks are necessary.

The ultimate ironic hypocrisy is when they whine at me for being nasty, not because I condone any violence against them, but because I point out the immorality of what they advocate, including against me personally.

It really is as insane as a carjacker getting all offended and pouty at an intended victim, because the intended victim called him an asshole for trying to steal his car.

If it hurts your feelings to have voluntaryists point out that it’s bad for you to be cheering for widespread violent aggression, then maybe you should stop doing that!
