

On Abortion

It is my understanding that American progressives (and liberals) have it as one of their highest ideals to fight for the interests of the most marginalized and downtrodden of groups. For that reason they fight for the right for women to abort their unborn babies without fear of legal reprisal by governments. I support this fight. However, there is another group more marginalized and downtrodden than women affected by abortion: their unborn babies. Why are progressives fighting for the interests of the stronger and more powerful group of the two, women verses unborn babies? Which group is more disadvantaged in this fight, desperately needing a champion to save them? It makes no goddamned sense. And that's today's two cents.
