

Protecting the Delusion of “Good Government”

I find it disgusting when someone is so dishonest they advocate “good government,” as if such a contradiction were even possible.

Like this delusional statist: This is what democracy looks like.

So, I posted a comment:

“Good government” makes about as much sense as “compassionate rape”.

<http://famguardian.org/Publications/OurEnemyTheState/OurEnemyTheState-byAlbertJKnock.pdf>

Surprise, surprise, my comment was removed by TED.

Now, I just know if I had said the exact same thing, ridiculing something other than “good government”– say, something anti-Trump or something– they wouldn’t have had a problem with it. It would have fit with their agenda. I seriously doubt their censors automatically remove any comment with the word “rape” in it. I believe they were triggered by my accurate observation which offended their sensibilities.

Prove me wrong.