

Re: Politics Anonymous

Parrish, I have been sober from politics for about five years now. Prior, I never imagined not embracing what everyone else I knew, and what all of my teachers and elder family members assured me through their admonishments and example was right and good, that is, participation in the political process. But as attempt after attempt to steer the state towards liberty failed, I eventually realized that the political process is stacked against freedom. I've since abandoned the drug of politics and could not be happier with my efforts in the liberty movement. You'll get there!

Skyler.
