

Statism is the Ultimate Embodiment of Vice

Pride is the worst kind of vice, power is the worst kind of pride, political power is the worst kind of power, and state power is the worst kind of political power.

In other words, statism is the worst and most destructive embodiment of vice, capable of causing unlimited physical and psychological misery.

To fight against it is to fight against vice itself in its most concentrated and intense form. Thus, to fight for full and unconditional respect for individual life, liberty, and property is literally to fight for the most essential and noblest moral cause in existence.

And really advancing this cause requires never giving in to evil, but proceeding ever more boldly against it – every place, every time, and every way.