

The Voluntary Good

Guest post by Lou.

A question came up in the comments section of a previous article. “Do businesses always have the best interests of the nation in mind when making business investments or do they have the best interests in their business?” My answer came quickly, “No. Businesses do not always have the best interest of the nation in mind... nor should they.” Certainly this may sound harsh to those bombarded with the propaganda of the State and the Social Contract. This response would most likely give progressives heart palpitations and cause them to foam at the mouth!
