

Unparalleled Threat to Our Existence

Not a day goes by that I don't hear about or talk to someone whose life has been irrevocably harmed by the state. If you haven't yet experienced this, consider yourself fortunate, but please try to have some empathy for the millions of people who are languishing under state oppression.

The entirely unnecessary suffering and brutality experienced by the state's myriad victims is truly the greatest tragedy mankind has ever experienced, yet many—even among the state's victims—are blind to the unparalleled threat the state poses to their existence and well-being.