

Wage Slavery

Manuel Amador smashes the idea that because nature compels a man to work a crappy job, he is a wage slave to his boss. I would add, that to the extent that the other choices listed in Amador's rebuttal are coercively prohibited by third party individuals either working for government or not, or coercively made more costly, one is a wage slave. However, he is not made so by his boss, unless his boss in another capacity influences or supports the coercively acting third party individuals.

Skyler.
