What if Software Ate it?

I think we're still at the beginning of the software takeover of the world.

A good question for your interests and vocations is, "What would this look like eaten by software?"  Some things, like fantasy football, are pretty close already.  Some, like banking, are halfway there.  Others, like buying a house or going out to eat, are nowhere near consumed by software.

What would a software maximum look like in these, and every other area?

Once you start to imagine it, think about how you can orient yourself to win in that world, because it's coming.