

Why Do We Obey?

Guest post by Eric Peters.

If some random guy ordered you to submit to his will - or else - most of us would at least consider it assault. Many of us would try to escape - or defend ourselves. Very few would quietly submit. And almost no one would submit willingly.

But when exactly the same thing is done to us by a person wearing a uniform, most of us not only submit and obey - we do so without even questioning the rightness of the thing. Read the full thing »
